

Deconsolidating Local Food Systems

Photo credit to ashevillenc.com/area_info/local_food

Americans rely upon a global industrialized food system. Few have ever known any other way, but trending conversations around local and sustainable foods suggest that this way isn't really working -- so what are our options? Come to discuss what a decentralized, deconsolidated, bio-regional food system could look like, the pillars it will be built upon and some ways to begin investing in this alternative model.

Visit smallisbeautiful.com to learn about other events around small-scale living.

Emma Hutchens is an organizer and educator with the NC 10% Campaign and Real Food Challenge, supporting students and community members as they work to improve university food purchasing and shift money back into the local economy. Her other projects include working with the Asheville Grown Business Alliance and co-producing The Looking Glass Radio Hour and the Community News Hour with local community radio station, Asheville FM.

JOIN US in the cafe at Greenlife Grocery
Thursday, October 22
Meet 'n Greet @ 6:30 PM | Presentation + Q&A 7-8 PM

